From the Desk of President

On behalf of the Board members of the eHealth Consortium, we would like to wish all of you a Very Happy New Year.

Over the last twelve years, the eHealth Consortium has been leading the eHealth development by bridging healthcare and IT industries. We have been engaged in many spectacular events and activities, such as Asia Pacific Electronic Health Records Conference; eHealth Forum cum Annual Dinner; seminars and etc. All these provided great opportunities and platforms for the stakeholders of eHealth Sectors sharing their valuable experiences and studies; boosting the growth of smart health in Hong Kong and Greater China region.

While journey of more than a decade is certainly a milestone, it's the future and our mission to keep striving for the advancement of local eHealth industry. In the meantime, I appeal to all members to support us in promoting eHealth implementations in Hong Kong and Greater China Region. Last but not least, I wish to thank all of you for participating in our events and offering your ideas for continuous improvements of eHealth Consortium.

Patients and Medical Professionals Benefit from Using Electronic Pen Device

Improve your registration and consent process, medical records efficiencies, and patient communications by using a Wacom pen directly on the screen

Signing, writing and drawing with an electronic pen is easy for anyone

Patients enjoy signing registration and consent forms with Wacom signature pads and pen displays because the electronic pen feels like a traditional ink pen. The patient can read important text on the screen, and they see the electronic ink on the screen appear as they sign their name. Hospitals and clinics who implement a paperless registration and consent process save time and costs associated with dramatically reducing paper.

For many years, pen and paper has been the standard way for doctors and other medical professionals to update patient charts and to explain conditions, diagnosis, and treatments, with simple drawings and annotations. Using an electronic pen to draw and write directly on a Wacom screen is a natural way for medical professionals to enjoy all the benefits of electronic medical records, without changing how they prefer to communicate to patients. Wacom makes the digital world feel like the real world.
